County Commission Meeting Advances Potential Development Incentives (KAIR) -- Atchison County and Atchison city officials met Tuesday to hammer out more concrete details on a revamped neighborhood revitalization project.

First presented at the May 2 joint city-county commission meeting, city officials say the project is slated to entice developers to invest in already existing buildings in the way of tax abatements in Atchison County.

County commissioners said they're intrigued by the proposal but still have further questions and concerns. However, both parties left the meeting excited about the potential of the project.

The next step is presenting more data on how job creation would grow and whether or not to include the cities of Effingham, Muscotah, Lancaster and Huron.
