Severe weather training for Brown County
(KNZA)--Being prepared for the worst.

That's the reason for Thursday's Brown County training session, focused on the approach of the spring severe weather season.

The session will take place Thursday evening, April 5th, in the Horton Community Blue Building located at 716 1st Avenue West.

The free training session, which is open to the public, will begin at 7:00, and last about 90 minutes.

A National Weather Service meteorologist will discuss various aspects of severe weather, storm spotting, and severe weather safety.

The training session is being held to prepare for the spring severe weather season in Kansas.
