

Atchison's Muddy River music lineup put in place

(KAIR)--Although summer is still in the distance, plans for an Atchison autumn tradition are finalized, with the lineup for the annual Muddy River concert now complete.

Locally Atchison Executive Director Jim Rowland, in a release, calls the now finalized lineup "a great combination of future stars," as Tigerlily Gold is named to headline the September 21 concert at the Atchison riverfront. The sister duo returns to Atchison following their local performance last year. The release says the duo, whose latest single is "I Tried a Ring On," was featured as part of CMT's "Next Women of Country for 2024."

Also performing will be Jacksonville-born, and Nashville-based, Jordon Fletcher, an artist the release says pays "intense attention to detail over authentic country spiked with rock spirit."

Prior to his performance, Carter Faith, described as "Cowgirl Hippie" in the release, will take the stage, with the North Carolina native named "Next Women of Country" in 2023 by CMT.

The September 21 concert will be opened by a local area act, as St. Joseph, Missouri's Tequila Mockingbird is named to that slot.

Early bird tickets go on sale April 1, and can be purchased online at visitatchison.com.
