Jenkins Addresses State of the Union

Disappointment, regarding the tone of President Barack Obama's Tuesday night State of the Union Address, is expressed by Congresswoman Lynn Jenkins.

The Kansas Republican says the Democratic president used the national stage for political posturing, not as a way to find solutions, to the nation's problems(Play Audio 35 secs)

Jenkins calls the address a far cry from the message of unity heard from President Obama just a few short years ago; and, while the Kansas Congresswoman says she's ready to work with the President on solutions, she believes the rhetoric of the speech shows a greater desire for reelection than for finding answers.
