

Attack on police sends Atchison woman to jail

(KAIR)--An Atchison woman, accused of kicking police officers when they responded to a domestic incident this week, faces related charges for her crimes.

According to a report from Atchison Police Chief Mike Wilson, it happened Wednesday, around 12 noon, when Atchison Police Officers “responded to a domestic disturbance in the 300 block of North 14th Street,” where 32-year-old “Gabrielle Cline was taken into custody for domestic battery involving” a 48-year-old man.

Wilson says it was during her arrest that Cline kicked officers and resisted arrest, but was ultimately taken into custody.

The victim of Cline’s alleged domestic battery, as well as several police officers, received minor injuries that required no medical treatment.

Cline now faces charges for domestic battery, battery on a police officer, and interference with law enforcement.

Following her arrest, Cline was booked into the Atchison County Jail.
