(KAIR)--Just over a month after Atchison County unveiled its newly revamped website, with a goal of providing self-service features and greater transparency to the public, the Atchison County Sheriff- Office follows suit, launching what a release calls “a new responsive website...where citizens can find the latest information regarding the operations of the Atchison County Sheriff- Office.”

According to the release, issued Wednesday by Atchison County Sheriff Jack Laurie, “the new website will serve as an information resource for the public and assist with community policing efforts,” adding that “the responsive design allows site visitors to access the information they want and need from any device with simple, flexible navigation.”

The website can be found at atcosheriffks.org.

The release explains that the site “features a live Inmate Roster, Registered Offenders (Offender Watch), Press Releases, Employment Opportunities, Online Employment Application, Crime Tip Submissions, and information about all divisions and services of the Atchison County Sheriff- Office,” with the goal being “to provide transparency between [the Sheriff- Office] and the public.”

In addition to the new website, which Laurie says has a responsive design allowing users to quickly and conveniently access it, the Sheriff- Office will also be launching a free mobile app of the website, which is expected to be released to app stores in the near future.
